NEWS REVIEW OF CURRENT EVENTS

Farmers of United States at Last Get Together for Mutual Benefit.

By EDWARD W. PICKARD

FOR the first time in history the farmers of all sections of the United States are getting together to work for their mutual benefit. Wheat growers, corn growers, cotton planters and live stock raisers, numbering more than two millions, decided at the meeting of the American Institute of Co-Operatives in Baton Rouge to create a national chamber of agricultural co-operatives with headquarters in Washington. This organization, which is expected to be the strongest of its kind in the world, will be ready to function almost immediately and its officers will represent the nation's farmers before congressional committees and in all ways act for them in public matters.

This action follows closely on the formation of a committee of leaders of farmer co-operative groups for the purpose of organizing the producer-owned $20,000,000 grain marketing corporation proposed by the new federal farm board. The members of this committee are now conferring with their respective groups and conducting a drive for membership. They met again in Chicago August 25 and soon thereafter will be in Washington preparing for incorporation of the big concern. William H. Settle, head of the Indiana Farm Bureau federation, is chairman of the committee. He was prominent in the "farmers' revolt" at the Republican national convention last summer. The new corporation was officially named the Farmers' National Grain Corporation.

To the meeting in Baton Rouge, Chairman Leake of the federal farm board set forth his views of the problem of maintaining American agricultural culture, and his outline of the board's program was approved by the other members. Mr. Leake made it plain that the only farmers' organizations which will receive financial help from the board are those that are efficiently organized and properly administered within the provisions of the law. The kind of co-operative organization he has in mind is one that will exert a real influence on a marketing agency in the marketing of the products of the more than 60,000 farms, an organization that was ever, as he put it, "as tight as a mackerel's head of butter." Over the loss of those products to the market and an agency standing in control of the condition under which the products of American farmers are sold. The board, he emphasized, never will buy or sell any commodity.

President Hoover completed the membership of the farm board by naming Samuel R. McLeister, former governor of Nebraska, to represent the wheat growers. Mr. McLeister accepted the appointment with the understanding that he may visit Iowa at the end of the year. He is the owner of the Nebraska Farmer and was inducted by a large number of farm organizations, and Mr. Hoover chose him for the place after the different wheat groups were unable to unite upon a recommendation.

JOHN W. GIBBETT of Baltimore, former ambassador to Italy, has been appointed American ambassador to Italy to succeed Henry R. Fletcher who is retiring from the service and will leave for Rome very soon. Mr. Gibbett has had nearly twenty years of service to the diplomatic corps and other foreign service. He was first secretary of the American embassy at Rome from 1904 to 1911 and also has served as minister to the Netherlands, Venezuela and the Argentine and was secretary general of the Washington peace conference.

PRESIDENT HOOVER'S decision to suspend work on the three craters that were to be laid down to many people next autumn aroused a lot of adverse criticism as well as a feeling of those who expressed his disapproval was Paul V. McNutt, national commander of the American Legion. In a reply to Mr. McNutt the President says he is relying on the agreement between the United States and Great Britain looking to complete equality in the strength of their navies. He describes the agreement as "the first step of the renewed consideration of reduction of the excessive world naval armament" and holds it to be "a forward step of the first importance," reiterating his position that defense is all that the United States is seeking.

DRASTIC economies in the American military establishment are contemplated by President Hoover, and he has ordered a general staff survey of army expenditures. He expects a report with recommendations in time for the submission of an economic budget at the next regular session of congress. Branches of the military establishment, especially the cavalry and the coast artillery, were alarmed and at once began marshaling arguments in their behalf. Outraged by the army the opinion was that the President's move was a threat especially against the many "political" posts that are of no military value and are maintained at great expense through the influence of congressmen and politicians of the districts or states in which they are located.

Senator Bingham of Connecticut said: "At least 50 of the garisons which the taxpayers are now called upon to maintain are not needed for national defense and have no military value. The army is considering the establishment of three large divisions East, South and Far West—and the limitation of army posts to a few, well planned and chosen because of the proximity to division headquarters as well as their availability for training large units of the service together, would be not only economy but sound military practice."

Of course the Infantry school at Fort Benning, Ga., the general service schools at Fort Leavenworth and similar projects should be maintained, but there are forts and posts all over the country that should be abandoned, the property on which they are located should be sold, and the proceeds applied elsewhere in the service.

LOSS of the Lamport and Holt liner Vestra with 112 lives last November off the American coast was due in part to overloading, according to the findings of the British board of trade which conducted a long and thorough inquiry. Other contributory causes were the "tender" condition of the ship; her insufficient margin of stability and reserve of buoyancy; the heavy weather encountered; and water finding its way into the lower bunkers. Some of the company's agents in New York and several of the ship's officers came in for varying degrees of blame.

REPRESENTATIVES of Soviet Russia and China began negotiations for the settlement of the Manchurian quarrel, meeting on a train placed on the border line near Manchouli. The Chinese embassies were said to have indicated a willingness to restore the Chinese Eastern railway to its "status quo ante" provided that Russia furnished guarantees to refrain from communist propaganda in Manchuria. A Russian agent along the Manchurian border, blamed largely on the "Soviet" Russians, led the Soviet government to order out all the Siberian reserves up to the age of twenty-seven years. They were assembled at Khabarovsk, Vladivostok and Chita.

A half a billion cotton mill workers of England went on strike rather than accept a 12½ per cent reduction of wages proposed by the employers. Consequently practically all the mills of the Lancashire region were closed. The operators refused to yield and the weavers and spinners would not listen to talk of negotiations, so it seemed the dispute was likely to be long drawn out. The minister of labor, who is Miss Margaret Bondfield, says there is no action her department can take at present.

CHIEF and Peru have signed a protocol complementary to the general treaty concerning Tacna and Arica.

It states emphatically that no part of the territory covered in the general treaty shall be ceded to a third power, which seems to put an end to Bolivia's strong hopes of gaining an outlet to the Pacific ocean.

SUDDEN Communist uprisings in two sections of Colombia were put down after bloody battles with the soldiers and police. The casualties were at least a dozen killed and many hurt. Thursday, August 1, was named "anti-imperialism day" by the Communists, and they made demonstrations in many of the large cities of Europe, though their activities were curbed by the authorities everywhere except in the Soviet republics.

DALE JACKSON and Forest O'Brien, flying the Curtiss-Robinson monoplane St. Louis Robin above St. Louis, Mo., established a record for sustained flight that may stand for a long time. They remained in the air 420 hours 21 minutes and 30 seconds, and then landed not because they or their engine was worn out, but in order to attend the funeral of a friend, another aviator, who was killed in a crash. They made 77 contacts with another plane, 47 of which were for refueling, and they flew approximately 25,200 miles, or about the distance around the world at the equator. The two pilots earned more than $12,500 by their exploit. The flight was especially a triumph for the motor, a six-cylinder air-cooled radial type engine designed by Arthur Nutt. After being tested in St. Louis, Jackson and O'Brien started on a tour of the country in their record-breaking plane, following about the same route taken by Col. Charles A. Lindbergh two years ago.

An endurance flight started at Minneapolis ended in the crashing of the plane and the death of the pilots, Owen Haugland and Capt. Preston L. Crichton. They had been up 154 hours. Lieut. Harold Bromley, intending a nonstop flight from Tacoma, Wash., to Tokyo, came to grief as his monoplane slid down the runway and turned over on its right wing and was smashed. He promised to make another start as soon as he could get another plane. Roger Q. Williams and Lewis Vancey, the New York-to-Tokyo flyers after being entertained in New York, flew to Chicago, Vancey's home city, where they were given a great reception and banquet under the auspices of the Chicago Press club.

SEVENTEEN hundred convicts in Auburn prison, New York state, made a desperate attempt to gain their freedom, battling the guards and police for five hours and burning down some of the prison buildings. They seized the arsenal and armed themselves with rifles, pistols and four machine guns, and the ensuing fight was sanguinary. Two convicts were killed and four guards were wounded. Four of the prisoners made their escape in the confusion. This affair, coming only six days after the full uprising of the inmates of Clinton prison, Danvers, aroused the state authorities, and Governor Roosevelt called for a thorough investigation. The New York state prisons are admittedly greatly overcrowded, and more outbreaks are feared.

M. POINCARRE, who resigned as premier of France immediately after the parliament had ratified the war debt settlements with the United States and Great Britain, has been succeeded by Aristide Briand, who retains his portfolio of foreign minister, and who has made almost no change in the cabinet. Briand's first task was to obtain a vote of confidence for the government's negotiations at the international conference to put in operation the Young reparations plan which meeting was scheduled for August 6 in The Hague. The vote was announced in London that Prime Minister MacDonald would not attend the conference and that Great Britain would be represented by Foreign Minister Henderson, Chancellor of the Exchequer Snowden and William Graham, president of the board of trade. MacDonald and his government have declared their opposition to the Young plan as it now stands, feeling that it involves too much sacrifice of British interests for the benefit of France.

THE FOWLER RANGE OIL BURNER has the following features, not found in other burners:

- It is built for long life, the casting alone weighing approximately 30 pounds.
- Has a 6 Gallon Galvanized Iron Tank; doing away with the small objectionable glass bottles.
- Each burner is equipped with a brass carburetor to regulate the flame. This is not used on other burners, and absolutely does away with air pockets in the oil lines.
- Lights without priming, and produces a high temperature flame very quickly.

The Fowler Range Oil Burner is built for long life. Compare its castings, oil brass fittings and needle valves with any other burner on the market, and judge for yourself the great difference in cost.

BULLETIN ON PULLORUM DISEASE READY FOR DISTRIBUTION

Since half the poultry flocks in Maine are believed to carry infection of Pullorum disease, a new disease covering seventeen questions and answers is now ready for distribution, according to Dr. Leon S. Merrill, director of agricultural extension, University of Maine.

Dr. F. L. Russell, head of the department of bacteriology and veterinary science and H. L. Richardson, extension poultry specialist, are joint authors of the new publication.

During last year approximately 60,000 birds were tested for flock owners throughout the state, and it is stated that at least 100 flocks are free of this disease. Demand for the disease free stock from these flocks exceeded the supply. Accredited flock owners had orders for over 100,000 chicks and hatching eggs that they could not fill. Pullorum disease was formerly known as Bacillary White Diarrhea.

The bulletin, it is said, will be sent to those who address the college of agriculture at Orono or at any county agent's office in any county.

Grease Will Save It!

You'd slow down driving if you came to a bumpy road. "Easier on the car," you'd say. All right, how about driving it mile after mile without a drop of grease on it?

Don't drive that way. It'll put your car on the cheap long before its time.

Grease not only will save it, but keep it young too. Regular greasing will keep your car new. Try it—then keep it up.

We have the latest and best equipment for expert lubrication service.

Why Accept a "Mileage Guarantee" When GOODYEARS are Guaranteed for LIFE?

When you are tempted to buy a tire because it is "guaranteed for so many miles" just remember this:

It will cost you no more to buy a Goodyear Tire and Goodyear tires are guaranteed for life!

Remember this, too: no guarantee is worth any more than the tire itself. And Goodyear Tires are so good, so satisfactory, that more people ride on Goodyear Tires than on any other kind. That fact proves what other tires can only claim.

Right here in your neighborhood we are ready to demonstrate for you the things that make Goodyear Tires the choice of experienced car owners everywhere. These points are

1 The All-Weather Tread 2 The Supertwist Carcass
Goodyear's superiorities in both of these features can be demonstrated right before your eyes. Come in any time.
